

Shared branching

Everence Federal Credit Union

You can bank with Everence Federal Credit Union at nearly 5,000 credit union branches nationwide through the CO-OP Network.

With shared branching, you can visit any credit union displaying the Credit Union Service Center network logo (left) and you can make deposits, withdrawals, transfers or loan payments to your Everence Federal Credit Union account.

A shared branch is not an ATM, but a fully staffed office where you can conduct Everence Federal Credit Union business with real people.

The shared branching network is perfect for members who:

- Don't live near a Everence Federal Credit Union branch.
- Move to a new community.
- Travel for business or vacations.
- Go to college away from home.

When visiting a shared service branch, you will need to provide them with:

- The name of your credit union – Everence Federal Credit Union.
- Your member number as it appears on your account statement.
- A photo ID.

The shared branch will be linked automatically to your Everence account.

Please note that deposits cannot be left in a night deposit box. All deposits must be made in person so your identification can be confirmed.

Shared service branches may charge members a fee for some services. Check the member fee schedule on display or ask the staff at the branch to see if fees apply. Shared branches may be limited in the transactions they can perform.

To find a shared branch location:

- Go to everence.com and click on "Locations and ATMs" and then "Find a shared branch or ATM."
- Open the Everence Federal Credit Union mobile app and click on "Locations and ATMs."
- Text your ZIP code to 91989 to find locations near you.
